Austin, Texas is home to big music with more music venues per capita than any other city across the nation. Along 6th Street, you'll find bars, clubs, art galleries and cafes where live music is regularly featured in every genre you can imagine. Austin also hosts popular music festivals, such as South by Southwest (SXSW), Austin City Limits Music Festival and many others. Austin There's more to enjoy in Austin than music, though. With more than 250 parks, preserves and greenbelts in Austin, you'll have easy access to greenspace for walks, picnics, tennis matches and more. The University of Texas at Austin adds a feeling of livelihood and a youthful spirit that Austinites find very appealing. Houston and the Texas Beaches If you're more interested in living close to beaches, head southwest to Houston, where you'll find Texas apartments within an hour's drive to beaches such as Galveston Beach. Houston is also home to the Johnson Space Center, The University of Houston and a great museum district. San Antonio:From the River Walk to the Spurs You'll see that San Antonio also has a lot to offer, including the Paseo del Rio (the San Antonio River Walk), numerous theme parks and charming neighborhoods that not only attract visitors, but keep long-time residents in the area. The city is perhaps most known for its Tejano culture, the historic Alamo and the 16-time NBA Champions, the San Antonio Spurs. San Antonio also boasts a cost of living that's significantly lower than the national average. As a result, San Antonio apartments are available across a wide range of price points. Dallas Dallas has more than a million residents and there are plenty of options for work and play. Whether you're looking for a night on the town, a variety of restaurant options or something fun for your kids to do, you can find all these things and more in Dallas. From the inexpensive to the luxurious, you can find just the right home for your taste and budget in Texas cities like Austin, Houston, Dallas and San Antonio, as well as in smaller cities throughout the state. "It's like a whole other country," according to the motto of the state tourism board. Texas could truly be quite a large and successful country in its own right; it certainly has the size, economy and natural resources to do it up big, in typical Texas fashion. But at the same time, this is a quintessentially American land, where residents are patriotic, friendly, successful...and proud of it all. What to Expect The Lone Star State is famous for doing things on a grand scale, and the economy is certainly no exception. Texas is the country's foremost supplier of oil, beef and cotton. The space industry, high-tech industries, natural gas and manufacturing are all important components of the state's economy as well. Of course, agriculture still plays a large role in the economy, as Texas boasts more farmland than any other state. There are almost too many attractions and points of interest to catalog in Texas's 267,000 square miles; suffice it to say that you'll find plenty to do and see whatever your taste. For outdoor lovers, there's the Gulf Coast resort area and numerous state parks. Technology nerds will enjoy the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Houston, while history buffs will want to visit the Alamo in San Antonio and the state capital in Austin. And, of course, there are enough opportunities for rodeo watching, line dancing and barbecur eating to satisfy any Texan, whether a native or a newcomer. Where to Explore Texas has an excellent overall cost of living. Plenty of apartments are available in the state's largest cities, which include Houston, Dallas, Austin, San Antonio, Fort Worth and Arlington. Houston The city of Houston, covering nearly 9,000 square miles and home to more than 2 million people, is a perfect microcosm of the things that make Texas great. With its signature blend of big-city diversity and down-home Texas hospitality, Houston is cosmopolitan and full of charm at the same time. A thriving economy, flourishing downtown and green parks combine with a mild year-round climate to make this one of the best places to live in the nation. Need more proof? The cost of living is lower than most other large metros in the country, and there are plenty of apartment rentals to choose from, most of which are reasonably priced. Look for the nicest housing options in the affluent neighborhoods in the west and southwest areas of town. Dallas The second-largest city in Texas with about 1.3 million residents, Dallas prides itself as being a cultural and educational center. Institutions of higher learning include Southern Methodist University, Paul Quinn College, the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, Dallas Baptist University, Dallas Christian College, Dallas Theological Seminary and the University of Texas at Dallas. Also of special note are the architecture of the downtown area and the West End Historic District, a collection of 19th-century warehouses converted into eclectic shops and restaurants. Dallas is famous for its pro sports teams, including the Dallas Cowboys pro football team, the Mavericks pro basketball team, Stars pro hockey team and Rangers baseball team. It's also famous for fans who are devoted to their teams and their successes each season. Austin Truly a city on the rise, the state capital's population has been growing in recent decades thanks to the growth of high-tech industry, including computer technology and research organizations. Austin is also famous for its music scene, which has earned the city the nickname "The Live Music Capital of the World." The annual South by Southwest music festival introduces music lovers to hundreds of new bands of every musical genre, and the long-running PBS series Austin City Limits continues to be the most popular music show in town. The combination of high-tech companies, cutting-edge music and the city's importance as the center of the Texan government gives Austin a young and trendy atmosphere that attracts thousands of newcomers every year.
