Canterbury Bulldogs Manly Sea Eagles Sunday, 27 July 2025 4:05 PM AEST The 2025 NRL season is split between services that require a subscription and free-to-air TV. Each and every game of this year’s premiership season, up until the grand final, will be screened live with no ads on the Fox League channel. To watch the NRL live and ad-free, you will need to subscribe to either Foxtel Now, or Kayo Sports. Fortunately, both Foxtel Now and Kayo Sports currently have free trials, which would allow new customers to watch the NRL live and free online. You do have another option to watch selected NRL matches live on free-to-air with the 9 Network, but ads will be broadcast during live play, and could interfere with the game’s most pivotal moments. Likewise, channel nine will only broadcast up to four NRL games live each round, and they will generally not carry any Saturday matches until the 24th round. The NRL Premiership has its own dedicated Fox League channel, so that league fans have something to watch 24/7. There’s also a free to air NRL broadcast partnership – Channel 9 and 9Now. Kayo also have special NRL game features, including SplitView, Key Moments and a Match Centre. Another popular feature is Kayo NRL minis, which provide a condensed replay of any matches you may have missed, available at your convenience on-demand. Kayo also offers the exact same programming as Foxtel, including all the same weekly NRL shows, as well as the pre and post-game interviews and match break-downs. You can subscribe to Foxtel Now to watch NRL games online. Foxtel Now will carry every game of the NRL live and ad-break free until the grand final. New customers will get a 10-day free trial run when using Foxtel Now. Normal subscriptions cost $54 a month, but this would also include access to all the sport content that Foxtel have to offer. Foxtel Now will also air replays of every NRL match in the 2025 season, including the Grand Final. The replays, known as ‘Fox Minis’, are twenty minute condensed highlights of the game’s biggest moments. There’s also a variety of popular NRL programs that will air through-out the week, including NRL Tonight, NRL 360, The Fan show, The Late Show, Sunday Footy and several pre-game and post-game shows containing match break-downs and interviews. Foxtel Now is available on various devices including PC, Mac, iOS and Android, as well as Telstra TV, Chromecast, the newest PlayStations, and select Smart TV’s. Terrestrial provider Network Nine have broadcasting rights to televise NRL games on free-to-air TV in Australia. Under the current agreement, the Nine network have the rights to up to four live games each week. Generally, this will include the matches on Thursday and Friday night, one Sunday afternoon game, and any match that falls on Monday or a public holiday. Starting from round 24, however, Nine will carry one Saturday match live. These games are available live on channel 9 or 9 Mate. The games live on Nine are also available to watch later on-demand, using the 9Now online platform. The NRL streaming rights for the matches not being televised live on Nine belong exclusively to Foxtel and Kayo. In addition to select live games each round, Network Nine has other content to keep Rugby League fans updated. The two most popular NRL shows on Nine are 100% Footy, where Phil Gould, Paul Gallen and James Bracey debate the biggest NRL topics, and the Sunday Footy Show, which provides a round-up of all the NRL games on TV that week. The NRL on channel 9 and 9 Mate are great for fans who don’t follow any specific team, or only watch the matches during the finals series. For passionate NRL viewers, the reduced schedule, programming limitations and ad-breaks are not ideal. To Channel Nine’s advantage though, they do have exclusive rights to televise the NRL Grand Final live as it happens. They have joined Wests Tigers and Warriors, respectively, while Eels youngster Blaize Talagi has come in. But with Penrith Stadium undergoing redevelopment, how will they cope?The Storm are again expected to provide the Panthers’ biggest test. The Melbourne side even started last season’s Grand Final as favorites after topping the table to win the Minor Championship, only to fall at the final hurdle. Power prop Stefano Utoikamanu has joined the squad in the close season. Sualauvi Fa’alogo, Tyrn Wishart, Jack Howarth and Shawn Blore are all now a year more experienced and will be motivated by defeat to take that last step to a first title since 2017.Elsewhere, Manly Sea Eagles’ hopes will again rest on the fitness of Tom Trbojevic, who is the star in one of the best NRL backlines there is. Season-ending injuries have been a problem for the fullback, but youngster Lehi Hopate’s emergence will help.New Zealand must deal with the loss of Addin Fonua-Blake Cronulla-Sutherland Sharks and the retirements of Shaun Johnson and Tohu Harris, but signing Fisher-Harris is a step in the right direction. Even the Gold Coast Titans, who are two adrift at the bottom of the standings at the time of writing, are very much in the mix to make the finals series.The reigning champions had an extraordinarily bad start, losing their first six of eight, but you write them off at your own peril.
